Diphtheria.
A cold or sore throat may not seem to amount to much, and if promptly attended to can easily be cured; but neglect is often followed by consumption or diphtheria. No medicine has ever been discovered which acts so quickly and surely in such cases as PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER. The prompt use of this tried and reliable remedy has saved thousands of lives.
PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER is not an experiment. It has been before the public for forty years, and is most valued where it is best known.
A few extracts from voluntary testimonials read as follows:
PAIN KILLER has been my household remedy for colds for the past twenty-seven years, and have never known it to fail in effecting a cure.—L. S. CROCKER, Williamsville, N. Y.
For thirty years I have used PAIN KILLER, and found it a never-failing remedy for colds and sore throat.—BARTON SEAMAN.
Have received immediate relief from colds and sore throat and consider your PAIN KILLER an invaluable remedy.—GEO. B. EVERETT, Dickinson, N. Y.
I have had occasion to use PAIN KILLER in my family for forty years and have never known it to fail.—RANSOM LEWIS, Wayne-boro, Ga.
I began using PAIN KILLER in my family twenty-five years ago and have used it ever since, and have found no medicine to take its place.—B. W. DYER, Brunerel, Oneida, N. Y.
For whooping cough and croup it is the best preventive made. We would not be without it.—A. P. BOOTH, Liberty Mills, Va.
For twenty-five years I have used PAIN KILLER for colds and chapped lips, and consider it the best medicine ever offered.—GEO HOOPER, Wilmington, N. C.
I was suffering severely with bronchitis, and my throat was so inflamed I could scarcely swallow any food. I was advised to try your PAIN KILLER, and after taking a few doses was completely cured.—T. WILKINSON.
DR. WALTON writes from Coshocton: Your PAIN KILLER cures diphtheria and sore throat, to alarmingly prevalent here, and has not been known to fail in a single instance. This fact you should make known to the world.
Mrs. ELLEN B. MASON writes: My son was taken violently sick with diphtheria, high fever, and cold chills. So many children have died here, I was afraid to call a physician, and tried your PAIN KILLER. He was taken on Sunday, and on Wednesday his throat was clear. It was a wonderful cure, and I wish it could be known to the poor mothers who are losing so many children.
For Chills and Fever PAIN KILLER has no equal. It cures when everything else fails.
Delays are often dangerous. A bottle of PAIN KILLER in the house is a safeguard that no family should be without.
All druggists sell it at 25c., 50c., and $1.00 per bottle.

FLIRTATION.

SUMMER.

Two summer weeks—oh, short the time!
How swift the sweet days roll!
Then every morning brought a row,
And every night a stroll.

These two were never seen apart,
No matter what the weather,
For rain and shine, in doors or out,
But brought these two together

WINTER.

On Beacon street they meet and pass—
A bow, and that is all.
Says she, "The fool I met at York—
Hope he won't come to call.

He sees her bow and lifts his hat,
Politeness to the letter,
Says he, "By Jove, I've seen that girl,
I wonder where I met her!"

THE SELFISH OYSTER.

There once was a selfish old Oyster,
Who lived like a monk in a cloister,
Safely housed in his shell,
Like the monk in his cell,
Though the bivalve's apartment was moister.

Anchored tight in the mud of the bay
This lazy old party did stay.
Nor cared he to roam
Very far from his home;
For exertion, he thought, did not pay.

And you will be wondering, I think,
What he did for his victuals and drink.
Well, the Oyster was sly,
And when young crabs came by,
He would catch them as quick as a wink.

Then in him the poor crabs had to stay,
Till in time they had melted away.
So the Oyster got fatter,
And the crabs—but no matter—
For crabs have no souls, people say.

"And oho!" said the Oyster, said he:
"What a lucky old party I be!
Like a king in his pride
I wait here, and the tide
Every day brings my living to me."

But there came a grim Star-fish, who spied,
Our friend lying flat on his side;
For the greedy old sinner
Had just had his dinner,
And now could not run had he tried.

With a spring to the Oyster he came,
And he threw his five arms round the same.
He shut off his breath,
And he squeezed him to death.
Then he ate him, nor felt any shame.

The point of this story, my dears,
Just "as plain as a pikestaff" appears.
But please give attention,
While briefly I mention
The moral again, for your ears.

Don't be greedy and live but to eat,
Caring only for bread and for meat;
Nor selfishly dwell
All alone in your shell,—
Don't be oysters, in short, I repeat.

But you'll find it much better for you
To be kind, and unselfish, and true;
Then you'll not lack a friend
Your case to defend,
When a Star-fish rolls into your view.

—George J. Webster; St. Nicholas for April

SELECT STORY.

THE JEWESS OF ROUDNIA.

TRANSLATED FROM THE FRENCH OF HENRY GREVILLE BY GEORGE D. COX.

We were passing through Poland in great haste. Pressing business urged us on: but, then, that almost flat country, marshy and unhealthy, which stretches out between Minsk and the Gulf of Bothnia, offers none of those attractions which induce the traveler to pause. The villages and towns succeeded each other along the interminable road, very much alike and differing only in the quantity of houses and huts, in the number or importance of the churches. As the view afforded nothing of the picturesque, the sight of the post stations alone gave us pleasure.

But when one is in a hurry a thousand disagreeable accidents are sure to entangle themselves together. Of course, such accidents always happen, even when one has plenty of leisure, but then they escape attention.

This time, however, a sort of fatality seemed to pursue us, for, at every relay or two, no horses were at the station, and we were forced to wait, sometimes an hour, sometimes half a day, which may be explained by the small importance of the road we had taken.

At last, by a happy stroke of luck, we got over a pretty long stretch of country without any hindrance.

"Some dreadful catastrophe must certainly overtake us," said I, with a laugh, to my traveling "companion, or fortune will not be satisfied with her day's work."

I had scarcely finished speaking when the postilion, half turning round upon his seat, pointed with the tip of his whip towards the town we were approaching.

"It is on fire!" said he phlegmatically.

A pink flush was visible near at hand, beneath the sky, the light blue of which—that periwinkle blue peculiar to the countries of the North—was darkened by the approaching night. The slightly jagged silhouette of the town was pictured in the focus, from whence escaped great whirlwinds of smoke, and the tinned dome of the Russian church reflected the flames like an imperfectly silvered mirror.

"What do you call that place?" asked I, of the postilion, as he vigorously whipped up his horses.

"Roudnia," said he "it's the town of Roudnia"

In the eyes of every Russian or Polish peasant three houses form a town, provided they are grouped around a town, and Roudnia possessed two churches, one of them Catholic.

The rapidly-moving horses reached the great beam, variegated with white, red and black, which was then the customary gate of every town. An official in a greasy uniform came to receive the stipulated toll. He cried out something unintelligible, and the beam placed across the road rose obliquely towards the sky. This species of gate, altogether primitive, yet exists upon many of the government highways, though Russia has done away with the tolls on the great roads. Our postilion urged on his great animals, and we went through two or three very dirty paved streets at a gallop.

A noisy crowd rushed in the same direction, towards the scene of the conflagration, and we nearly crushed half a dozen Jews who were running along, lifting their lengthy robes and uttering cries of distress.

"It's a Jew's house that's on fire," said the postilion, without ceasing to urge on the horses.

"How do you know that?" asked my companion.

"I smell the stench," answered the wag, laughing heartily.

The caleche suddenly turned a corner, at a great risk of being upset and stopped in front of the post station.

It was, in truth, the wooden house of a Jewish butcher which was burning before us on the square. The co-religionists of the poor fellow were throwing his furniture out of the front windows, the fire having engulfed the rear of the dwelling The front was yet entirely dark, but of the deep obscurity which precedes combustion. A few plumes of smoke, bluish in color, streamed here and there through the roof, presaging the general conflagration that was not far distant.

While my companion was seeing about obtaining fresh horses and about having our passport vised, I stood upon the porch of the station, which, raised a few feet above the level of the square, afforded a view of the entire scene.

A conflagration is not a rare thing in Poland, but when a Jew's house is on fire, only the Jews run forth and endeavor to extinguish it, while the others stand motionless looking on—not, perhaps, without a secret satisfaction, for perish the iniquitously acquired property of the sons of Abraham, seems, at such times, to be their motto.

This inhumanity is explained, if not excused, by the rapacity of the Israelites, who, by reason of their commercial ability, keep in their hands the greater part of the revenue of the unfortunate people, who are generally very poor, and are still further impoverished by the system of usury largely in vogue in Poland.

The wife and children of the butcher, seated in the centre of the square, filled the air with bitter lamentations. Dogs were barking, and our unhitched horses were shaking their collars covered with tiny bells, while other bells were being fastened to the harness of the fresh animals, the whole forming an inexpressible confusion of sounds, made up chiefly of sharp notes. I stopped my ears.

Suddenly I saw the Jews who were removing the furniture rush precipitately from the windows and the door. A flood of white smoke filled the house as they quitted it, and a red light appeared in the background. The interior portion had just caught fire. A comparative hush at once prevailed.

Such a moment has always something solemn about it.

"It burns beautifully!" said the tall Cossock soldier, who was standing beside me clad in his gray overcoat.

I stared at him; he was quietly smoking a short little cherry pipe. With short arms he contemplated the conflagration with undisguised satisfaction; but the snapping of his eyes showed that he had taken too many glasses of brandy.

"Woe! woe!" cried the voice of the butcher. He was in the middle of the square, and was gazing at his groaning family with a look of consternation. He tore his hair, and his little crisp curls frisked about in the wind from the impetuosity of his movements.

"Woe!" repeated the Jews in chorus.

"I have forgotten my aged mother!" cried the unfortunate man.

A burst of laughter from the Poles answered him.

"I thought her with you," said he to his wife, who was standing aghast, with her youngest child in her arms.

"Where is she?" cried some one.

With a hopeless look, he pointed to the house and covered his head with a portion of his robe.

The laughter stopped. Though a Jewess, she was still a woman.

"She is in the chamber to the left," said he. "It is not yet on fire. Save her, my friends," added he, in a voice full of anguish.

The friends who had aided him up to that moment glanced at the flames, then looked interrogatively at each other and remained silent.

"Go for her yourself!" exclaimed a boy in the crowd.

"I will give half of what I am worth to whoever shall save her!" cried the butcher wringing his hands. "Half, yes half," repeated he excitedly. "Save the poor old woman, my friends, my good gentlemen!"

He spoke now to the Poles. No one moved. The tall Cossack gave a start, then hesitated, and finally went and planted himself before the butcher, staggering a trifle as he did so.

"No tricks!" said he, his pipe still in his mouth. "What will you give me to go in there?"

He pointed to the house, now almost entirely wrapped in flames.

"Five silver roubles, my friend, five roubles. By the God of Abraham, five roubles!"

"That's nothing," said the Cossack. "But there's no time to bargain. You hear you people," cried he in a loud voice, "he says five roubles!"

A murmur of assent ran through the crowd.

"But you must bring her back with you," said the Jew, clinging to the soldier's sleeve; "if you do not you get nothing!"

"Imbecile," growled the Cossack, "I am not going in there for pleasure! Where is your old she goat of a mother?"

"Upon the bed in the corner of the chamber to the left."

"Good!" muttered the Russian. "With God's help," cried he, in a ringing tone.

And at a bound he leaped upon the steps.

The whole population of Roudnia held their breath. The soldier made the sign of the cross and vanished in the smoke.

"Your horses are ready," said the postilion to me, as he clambered into his seat.

"Wait," said I, in a low voice.

My friend had rejoined me and was watching like all the rest for the denouement of this drama.

The Cossack reappeared surrounded by flames. He bore the old Jewess in his arms in a half fainting condition, and yet held his pipe in his teeth.

A triumphant acclamation saluted him.

"Here's your old woman!" said he to the Jew.

At that moment the whole house burst into flame with a species of explosion; but the conflagration no longer interested anybody. All eyes were fixed on the Cossack.

"Come," said he, "pay me."

"What!" stammered the Jew "now? Wait until I have found a place of safety for my family."

"Notricks!" roared the Cossack, threateningly. "Pay me on the spot, or—"

From a habit of fear, the butcher threw his hands before his face; but the Cossack had no thought of striking him; he simply fixed upon him eyes full of growing anger. Blinded by his avarice, the Jew took no heed of this; he slowly took from his bosom a greasy wallet, opened it with a whine, rummaged it in my times, and, finally took from it a ragged bill which he presented to the Cossack The roof fell in with a shower of sparks. The square was as bright as day.

"A rouble!" cried the Cossack, hurling away his pipe, "a rouble for having risked my life!—a rouble! Ah, accursed dog! I prefer to return for nothing."

He caught the wretched old woman in his arms, and before any one could guess his purpose leaped toward the house. The steps were not yet on fire. He bounded upon them with his burden and cast it into the flames. Then, returning to the crowd, he shouted:

"A rouble! robber! beast! now go and get your mother out for nothing!"

The horrified concourse stood as if stricken dumb. I sprang into the caleche and my friend followed.

"Away as fast as possible!" said I to the postilion.

I felt that I could endure no more.

The moment the caleche started a portion of the front of the house fell forward, separating the soldier from the square. His tall figure was pictured upon the incandescent background He strove to leap through the flames, but, as he gathered himself to jump, a beam struck him on the head and he fell.

"Quick! quick!" cried I to the postilion, prodding him in the back to urge him on.

He whipped his horses into a gallop, the crowd scattered mechanically, and we were soon in the open country.

Not to Brindle Cows.

A man came into the office recently with a black eye, a strip of court plaster across his cheek, one arm in a sling, and as he leaned on a crutch, and wiped the perpiration away from a lump on his forehead, with a red cotton handkerchief, he asked if the editor was in. We noticed that there was quite a healthy smell of stock yards about the visitor, but thinking that in his crippled condition we could probably whip him, if worse came to worse, we admitted that we were in.

"Well, I want to stop my paper," said he, as he sat down on one edge of a chair, as though it might hurt. "Scratch my name right off. You are responsible for my condition."

Thinking the man might have been taking our advice to deaf men, to always walk on a railroad track if they could find one, we were preparing to scratch him off without any argument, believing him to be a man who knew when he had enough, when he spoke up as follows:

"The amount of it is this. I live out in Jefferson county, and I came in on the new Northwestern road just to get recreation. I am a farmer, and keep cows. I recently read an article in your paper about a dairymen's convention, where one of the mottoes over the door was, 'Treat a cow as you would a lady,' and the article said it was contended by our best dairymen that a cow treated in a polite, gentlemanly manner, as though she was a companion, would give twice as much milk. The plan seemed feasible to me I had been a hard man with stock, and thought maybe that was one reason my cows always dried up when butter was forty cents a pound, and gave plenty of milk when butter was only 15 cents a pound. I decided to adopt your plan, and treat a cow as I would a lady. I had a brindle cow that had never been much mashed on me, and I decided to commence on her, and the next morning after I read your devilish paper, I put on my Sunday suit, and white plug hat that I bought the year Greeley run for President, and went to the barn to milk. I noticed the old cow seemed to be bashful and frightened, but, taking off my hat and bowing politely said: 'Madame, excuse the seeming impropriety of the request, but will you do me the favor to hoist?' At the same time I tapped her gently on the flank with my plug hat, and putting the tin pail on the floor under her, I sat down on the milking stool."

"Did she hoist?" said we, rather anxious to know how the advice of President Smith, of Sheboygan, the great dairyman had worked.

"Did she hoist? Well, look at me, and see if you think she hoisted. Say I tell you now in confidence, and I don't want it repeated, but that cow raised right up and kicked me with all four feet, switched me with her tail and hooked me with both horns, all at once, and when I got up out of the bedding in the stall, and dug my hat out of the manger, and the milking stool out from under me, and began to maul that cow, I forgot all about the proper treatment of horned cattle. Why, she fairly galloped over me, and I never want to read your old paper again."

We tried to explain to him that the advice did not apply to brindle cows at all, but he hobbled out, the maddest man that ever asked a cow to hoist in diplomatic language.

A Glimpse of the Splendid Past.

Five hundred years before the birth of Christ there was a city in Italy called Sybaris. It was a magnificant place, and the wealth and luxury of its inhabitants was so great that the name Sybarite exists to this day as a pseudonym of a devotee of sensual pleasure. It was at one time so populous, that it could send 300,000 men into the field, yet its annals are lost and its great men unknown. All the information we learn about it is the fact of its greatness, and that its ruins are to day under the bed of a river in southern Italy. It seems there was a quarrel amongst the rulers of this mighty city, and the discontented joined with their enemies, the Crotonites, who succeeded in capturing Sybaris, drove out its inhabitants, and, to make its ruin complete, changed the course of a river so that it swept over the remains of the once mighty municipality. To-day the ruins are covered by a bed of slime and earth from sixteen to twenty feet deep, and soon the work of bringing the remains to light will be undertaken. It is believed that the memorials of a very distant past will be brought to light equal to, if not exceeding in interest, those of Pompeii. We live after all in a very old world. Mighty nations flourished, and prosperous cities gathered wealth to themselves long before history begun to keep its records. In these days of the marvelous applications of science to our daily life, it is well to remember the might of the past, in order that we should not become too conscious of the splendor of the age we live in.—Demorest's Monthly.

The Deacon's Nip.

"Does your father know?"

"He does not. Thank Heaven that sorrow was spared him."

The crickets chirped under the flagstones and the warm south wind came in soft puffs over the meadows, bearing upon its bosom the scent of the red-topped clover and the ox-eyed daisies as Rupert Redingote and Aphrodite McGuire stood by the path that led from the farm to the village of Roussillon, Macoupin county. They were to be married in the fall, these two—in the merry hard cider and corn-husking time—and, although scarce three months upon her pulsing lips the solemn passed since Rupert had pressed betrothal kiss Aphrodite trusted him with perfect faith that was almost sublime in its passionate intensity.

"So the old man didn't hear about my getting fall?" said Rupert.

"No," was the girl's response, as with a little, happy, take-it-away-for-ten cents sob she laid her gum-filled cheek upon Rupert's breast and twined her dimpled arms about his neck—"if any one had told him it would have been a cold day for you."

"You are singing on the right key now, Aphrodite," was Rupert's reply. "If the terrible fact had come to his knowledge he would part us forever. His position as deacon in the church would not allow him to overlook the fault, even should his stern, Puritan nature relent. No, darling, we must not let him know of this sin of mine."

As Rupert spoke a buggy was seen coming rapidly up the lane, and as it reached the gate the horse stopped suddenly and the man in the vehicle came out over the animal's head and fell with a dull, sickening thud into a hot-bed. The deacon had been taking a nip himself.—Chicago Tribune.

Essay on Spring.

Spring is the time for sowing. In the city women sew shirts at forty five cents per dozen. In the city, also, the wicked sow tares and reap tears. And every where in the springtime men sow the wind and reap the whirlwind. Spring is a season much sung about by poets. It is a season that moves people—especially about the first of May.

It is a season for raising things. The first thing generally raised in the spring is—the rent. After that comes spring radishes and greens.

Insects also come in the spring. The mosquito consults his ledger and makes out his bills for summer. Earwigs lay in a fresh supply of legs. Domestic and household insects resuscitate themselves and crawl and bite in their little beds. All nature stirs.

Spring also stirs up the theatrical combinations and menageries. The trained beasts and animals of all sorts prepare to take the road. The tramp dreams of fresh fields and pastures new, and lone farm houses where he may find the women unprotected making strawberry shortcake.

Spring comes every year. It brings new clothes to some and new fashions to all—if they can afford them. Usually it brings more clothes than people can afford to buy and fashions than they can afford to follow. Yet spring brings with it the old clothes people have worn all last winter and possibly the winter previous. These can be turned and dyed and made over, we will not say into new clothes, but into the resemblance of the new.

Braining a Panther With a Stone.

During the deep snow Oscar Mitchell went out hunting in the stamping bottom, lying between Ward's Cove and Morrison's Knob. He saw the track of some animal, followed it some distance and found that it went into a cave; he built a pen over the cave, setting his trap. Visiting it two mornings afterward, the trap still set, he saw no signs of the animal, but the third morning he went to his trap without any weapons. He walked up to within fifteen or twenty steps of the cave, saw the trap had caught the animal by the hind foot, and with its fore feet had torn the pen down and was lying quietly behind the rubbish; it saw him, and raising up on its hind feet for a fight (it looked four or five feet high), Mitchell stood hesitating for a moment what to do, but gathering two flint rocks (the animal stood still), he threw one with all his strength and struck the animal on the forehead, breaking his skull, killing it instantly; and walking up to see what it was, found that it was a panther.—*Tazewell (Va.) A Cattle King's Hundred Thousand Acres.

The ranches of "Cattle King" Powers, all making up a river frontage of eighteen miles and including a number of very productive meadows, are situated on the south side of the Arkansas, and all are under fence. Directly opposite these, beginning at Fort Lyon and reaching down the river a distance of twenty-two miles and extending back far enough to include an expanse of 80,000 acres, is another pasture under fence, the titles for which are in the same name. Here then are fully forty miles of water front and 100,000 acres of pasture under fence, all owned by one man. The fencing on these ranches will sum up over 100 miles. Northward to and even beyond the Kansas Pacific, and southward to Cimarron and beyond, into the Pan Handle of Texas, graze his cattle, more than 12,000 in number.—Las Animas Letter in Denver Republican.

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

FRIDAY, MARCH 31, 1882.

H. P. Hillman, one of the pioneer coal operators of Wilkes Barre and an ex-member of the Legislature, died suddenly Saturday, aged seventy-two years.

Subscriptions are being taken in many places for the wife and child of Sergeant Mason, who is now in the Albany penitentary under a sentence of eight years, for shooting at Guiteau.

When Andrew Jackson was President, the whiskey jug was handed around at the White House, but in the present enlightened age the guests at the Executive Mansion are furnished with seven different kinds of wine at dinner. Truly this is an age of progress.

Judge Advocate General Swaim has made his report,in which he declares the sentence of Sergeant Mason to be invalid, because of irregularities in the Court martial. Petitions to the President may as well stop until it is ascertained whether Mason has been guilty of anything for which he ought to be pardoned.

George W. Scoville has finally retired from the Guiteau case. He says the abuse heaped upon him by his brother-in-law is more than he can endure, and he now leaves the assassin to his fate. No other attorney has as yet consented to argue the bill of exceptions to the court in banc. Guiteau will probably have it all to himself.

There is a strong opposition among Republican lawyers of Philadelphia, to the re election of Judge Briggs of Common Pleas No. 4 of that city. Just what Judge Briggs has been doing does not appear,but he seems to have a good many friends who want to continue him in office, and a large number of enemies who would like to defeat him.

Congressman Joe Scranton delivers the Lackawanna delegation to the Republican State convention to Don Cameron, and in accordance with the bargain, the Senator promptly has Scranton's man confirmed as postmaster at Wilkes-barre. The next thing in order is for Orr to give Cameron the Luzerne delegation, but the probabilities are that he will have some trouble in delivering the goods.

Gen. Beaver, the machine candidate for governor, will most likely be nominated by the Republican convention. This will cause the nomination of an independent by the Wolfe faction. With Hon. S. P. Wolverton as our candidate, the Democratic party would be sure to win. The State convention must not give us an old broken down, office-seeking party hack. Give us a man who has never undertaken to urge his own claims.

On Tuesday the Supreme Court passed upon the case of the borough of Mauch Chunk against Fredrick C Kline. Kline fell while crossing Race street, Mauch Chunk, by snow made slippery by traveling, and sustained injuries for which a jury gave damages of $500. The case was taken by the borough to the Supreme Court. Justice Sharswood said a municipality cannot prevent general slipperyness of its streets by snow and ice, but it can prevent accumulations that render pedestrianism dangerous.

In getting up the record of the Philadelphia members of the Legislature Secretary Welchman, who is using the Legislative journals from which to get the necessary data,has got through with the record of the Senators. Senators Horatio Gates Jones and William J. Newell, President of the last Senate,are regarded as being as good as defeated already. Senator Jones and Senator Newell are both expected to be shelved this fall, as the Reform tidal wave at the late election completely inundated their districts, as it had done in a lesser degree at the two elections previous.

General Grant spent last Monday at the Capitol at Washington, interviewing prominent Senators, and urging them to help restore Fitz John Porter to the regular army. He said that he thought he had done Fitz John Porter an injustice for many years, and that he was determined to do now what he could to restore him to his old place in the army. General Grant called out a good many Senators and spoke very earnestly to all of them upon the same subject.. There is no bill now before the Senate for the restoration of Porter, but it is inferred one will soon be introduced for his relief.

The tariff bill passed the Senate on Tuesday by a vote of 38 to 15. It provides for a commission of nine members, to be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate, who are to receive as compensation for their services ten dollars per day when actually employed and traveling and other necessary expenses. They are to investigate all the various questions relating to the agricultural, commercial, mercantile, manufacturing, mining and industrial interests of the United States so far as the same may be necessary to the establishment of a judicious tariff or revision of the existing tariff and the existing system of internal revenue laws upon a scale of justice to all interests, and to report to Congress from time to time and to make a final report not later thanthe first Monday in January, 1883.

The Chinese must go. The President will probably sign the bill, which prohibits any further immigration from China for the next twenty years. A prominent Republican Senator in speaking of the bill a few days ago, said: I have been to the state department and talked with the officials there, and I have no earthly doubt but that China will abrogate the treaty now existing between the two countries, and that American merchants, both at home and in China, will be made to feel with telling force the folly of excluding the Chinese from the United States for the next twenty years. If this limit had been fixed at five or ten years, and at the end of that time it was deemed desirable to continue it longer, I am sure China would have offered no serious opposition, but now we slap China square in the face and tell her in substance that we don't care anything about our treaty stipulation. I predict that within three years that the pressure will be so great upon congress by the mercantile interests of this country, in consequence of injury inflicted by having no treaty with China, that the present will not only be amended but we will be compelled to give China better terms than would be necessary now.

Longfellow Dead.

AMERICA'S GREATEST POET CROSSES THE VALLEY OF SHADOWS.

Henry W. Longfellow, the poet, died at his residence in Cambridge, Mass. last Friday. He had been suffering from a complication of complaints, but the illness which proved fatal was peritonitis. He celebrated his seventy-fifth birthday, February 27.

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow was born at Portland, Maine, on the 27th of February, 1807. His father, the Hon. Stephen Longfellow, was a native of Newbury, Mass. The grandfather of Stephen Longfellow was born in Hampshire county, England, about the year 1651. He came in early life to Newbury, where he married Annie Sewall, a sister of Chief Justice Sewall. He was drowned in the Gulf of St. Lawrence during Sir William Phipp's expedition to Quebec in 1690. In 1804 Stephen Longfellow married Ziepah, eldest daughter of General Peleg Wadsworth, a descendant of John Alden,of Plymouth. Their son, the poet, was born nearly three years later. His early days were passed in his native city, where he attended the public schools. In 1821 the young man entered Bowdoin college and was graduated therefrom four years later. His earliest known poetical attempts were some stanzas on Venice which he wrote at the age of thirteen. After leaving college he studied law for a few months in his father's office, but as this was an uncongenial pursuit he gladly accepted the offer of the position of professor of modern languages at Bowdoin. In order to qualify himself for the duties which this office required he spent three years and a half traveling abroad, visiting France, Spain, Italy, Germany, Holland and England for this purpose. He came home in 1829, and began his professorship at Bowdoin, which continued until 1835, when the death of Mr. George Ticknor, who held the corresponding position in Harvard university, resulted in his accepting the vacant professorship in that eminent seat of learning. Before entering on his new task he again visited Europe, traveling in Scandinavia, Germany and Switzerland until the autumn of 1836. The summer of 1842 was passed at Boppord, on the Rhine. In the year 1854, after a service of seventeen years, he resigned his professorship of belles lettres, but continued to live at Cambridge, in the house once occupied by Washington. In 1868-9 he made his fourth trip to Europe, and was everywhere received with marked honors, among others that of D. C. L. of Oxford being conferred upon him. Harvard university had already made him L. L. D. and Cambridge, England, a doctor of common law, and in 1873 he was elected a member of the Russian academy of science In 1877 the Spanish academy conferred a similar honor upon him. The past few years the poet's health has been precarious, and since autumn his friends have dreaded that his indisposition would have fatal termination. Not quite a month ago, on the poet's birthday, the city of Cambridge honored the occasion with a public festival, as also did his native city, Portland, but his feebleness prevented him from taking part in the festivities. The poet married Mary S. Potter when he was but twenty-four, but his wife lived only eight years. Eight years later he married Frances Elisabeth Appleton, who died in 1861, from a shocking burning accident. He has a brother livsng, the Rev. Samuel Longfellow, pastor of the Unitarian church; and five children, two sons, one of whom is an architect and the other an artist, and three daughters, the youngest of whom married Richard Henry Dana, the son of the late Boston jurist.

HANGMAN'S DAY.

FIVE MEN EXECUTED LAST FRIDAY.

The first execution that has taken place in Snyder county since it was incorporated occurred last Friday at Middleburg, when Jonathan Moyer expiated on the scaffold his participation in the murder of old John Kintzler and his wife Gretchen. The execution was marked by one of the most remarkable scenes ever witnessed. A cousin of the condemned man, who had appeared as a witness against the latter upon his trial, and was thus indirectly instrumental in bringing about his terrible fate, sought to cross examine him on the scaffold, amid the unrestrained indignation of a large crowd. Jonathan had always declared that he had no hand in the murder of the old couple, although after his sentence he acknowledged that he had helped to rob them and burn their dead bodies.

At 11.26 Sheriff Reichly walked down the steps of the scaffold and struck the bolt with his hand; unfortunately two temporary props had not been removed, and only half of the trap fell, leaving the wretched man struggling on the other as it bent beneath his weight. The prop was hurriedly removed and the body fell with a sickening thud. There was not the slightest tremor of the body,and as the neck was not dislocated the unfortunate man was slowly strangled to death. After hanging for ten minutes Jonathan Moyer was pronounced dead and his body was taken down and handed over to his brother Joseph, who buried it on his land in Adams Township, Snyder County. As the crowd passed out the jail one man exclaimed, "Well he was the bravest man I ever saw die."

THE TROUTMAN MURDERERS.

Frank and Henry Rumberger were executed at Harrisburg for the murder of Daniel Troutman. As they marched to the scaffold Henry looked about him and smiled to an acquaintance from Lykens, and then marched direct for the door leading to the yard. Frank carried out his oft-expressed determination to keep his eyes shut from the time he left his cell until he "opened them in heaven," and he looked like a walking corpse as he shambled across the brick floor and into the yard, led by two ministers. At the foot of the gallows Henry looked up to the blue sky and then at the crowd, then he stepped nimbly up the narrow stairs to the platform and took his place under the noose. Frank, having his eyes shut, could not see the stairs and had to be assisted up dragging his feet along cautiously, but being not a particle nervous. He was led to the spot under the noose and there they stood, reciting in unison with the ministers the Lord's prayer. This over, Henry looked up, and catching sight of the dangling noose, caught hold of it to support himself, an action that created considerable astonishment among the spectators. Frank muttered a prayer in a low voice, and then as Rev. Heilman shook him by the hand he said: "Good bye, God bless you—you have been very good to me." Henry said the same to Rev. Rinck. Both men then shook hands, and their arms and legs were pinioned with straps. The noose was placed over their heads, and a white cap, like a bag drawn over their faces, and the Deputy Sheriffs leaped from the platform. As Sheriff Sausly descended the steps he struck the brass knob of the trap. The bar came out, the drop fell, and the Rumbergers were executed. It was done so quickly that but few on the grounds were prepared for it. Neither of the men's necks was broken, and they choked to death. After hanging fifteen minutes they were pronounced dead, but they were not cut down until the expiration of twenty minutes.

DRAMATIC SCENES AT CLEARFIELD.

John A. Neveling suffered the death penalty at Clearfield, for the murder of Samuel Pennington, at Houtzdale, February 17 1880. He was calm and apparently willing to die. At the time he committed the murder he boasted that he would die like a man, and the composure with which he met his fate proved that he meant the boast when he made it. On the night previous to the execution he paced his cell until 3 A. M., and then he slept until 5 A. M. At 7 o'clock he breakfasted, and an hour later he was visited by the father of his victim, who forgave him for killing his boy and offered the culprit consolation and religious counsel. About 9 o'clock Neveling dressed himself neatly and spent half an hour with his spiritual advisers, Revs. Leidy and Bear, who administered the sacrament. At 11 he was given tea and oysters. He supped from the cup but refused to eat any, and became very pale and nervous.

The Sheriff and his Deputy entered the cell at 1.15 P. M. The procession formed with Sheriffs Mahaffe and Dunkle from Centre County leading. They were followed by Neveling, supported by Revs. Leidy and Bear. The jury followed and then came the prisoner, who walked with a firm step. He exhibited unparalleled bravery.

Neveling spoke for five minutes without a tremor in his voice:—"Gentlemen, you have all come here to-day to see me executed. I am prepared to go. The devil has been working on me and has given me a dagger—a devil's dagger. I will prove it." Here he reached under his coat and pulled out a long dagger and flung it violently into the platform upon which he was standing. He spoke then how the devil had persuaded him to kill himself, and he trusted God to save him. He then knelt in prayer and prayed earnestly for two minutes, and then rose and stood erect without a quiver while the Sheriff adjusted the noose and cap.

The trap was sprung at 1.45, and the awful fall occurred. His neck was broken and he died in fourteen minutes. Only sixty people witnessed the execution, but there was an immense crowd outside the jail which kept good order.

On the night of February 13, 1880, at Houtzdale, Neveling an Pennington got into an altercation, which resulted in Neveling receiving several painful wounds on the head, made with a billy in the hands of his antagonist. They parted seemingly on good terms, and Neveling returned home, about a mile and a half from Houtzdale. During the night he threatened to take Pennington's life. The following morning, after drinking a large quantity of whiskey, he took his gun and went to Houtzdale. He came across Pennington, and coming up behind him he shot him, the wound proving fatal a month afterwards. The cowardly manner in which the shooting was done aroused great indignation, and threats of lynching were made. At the trial the following October Neveling was convicted of murder in the first degree. The Supreme Court affirmed the action of the lower court. Neveling was sentenced to be hanged Friday. The Board of Pardons was asked to commute the sentence, but refused to do so.

FRANK SMALL.

Standing on the scaffold, at Pittsburg, and in the almost visible presence of death, Frank Small publicly and impressively declared his innocence of the murder of Nicholas Jacoby. With one exception the execution was well managed throughout. The single exception was the admission by the Sheriff of several hundred persons to the Court House and grounds to witness the hanging. He was supposed to have issued only forty-five permits. When Small reached the yard on his way to the scaffold he remarked, sarcastically, on seeing the crowd of men gazing at him; "And these are the forty-five permits." He met his fate with coolness and great courage. His face reflected no terror and his step no weakness. He smiled when the scaffold met his sight, and he mounted it without hesitation.

"Have you anything to say?" asked the Sheriff.

"Only," he replied, "that I did not kill Nicholas Jacoby. I die an innocent man."

At 12.10 the drop fell. His neck was not broken and he died of strangulation. At the end of half an hour, the body was cut down The sentiment is very general that he was not guilty of the crime. He was convicted on the oath of the wife of the murdered man and it is believed that she knows more about the murder than the man who was hanged for it.

News Items.

During the year 1880 there were killed along the Yellowstone and Missouri river, Buffalo, Deer, Antelope and Elk amounting to 194,700, and in the year 1881 of the same animals there were killed 264,200, in value amounting to $45,000. The increase was caused by the demand for hides and the great advance in prices. Large game will soon be exterminated.

A large subscription has been recently raised in England for the restoration of the Temple of Solomon in Jerusalem. A kind of companion one has been commenced with great success by a Colonel of dragoons for the excavation of the ark of the convent, at a place called Lirra in Ireland, "as soon as the state of Ireland will permit." The prospects says that when Cyrus took the city, the Prophet Jeremiah escaped from his residence, about three miles above Jeruselam, with the ark and accompanied by two young princesses, to a vessel bound for Tyre. But the vessel, through adverse storms, drifted to the Irish coast. Here at Lirra one of the princesses died and was buried, and the ark was also buried for safety. According to the Bible,to touch the ark is death, so it is to be hoped the Colonel will take the first chance and not impose it on some poor Irish navy.

Maple Trees, and Sugar Making.

As sugar making is coming on, our readers will be interested in reading what Timothy Wheeler of Waterbury, Vt., writes as to "The Maple Tree and its Capabilities." He is said to have made the making of maple sugar a matter of close investigation and study. Mr. Wheeler says Vermont produces the best maple sugar made in the United States. He is satisfied that the sap, which flows from the tree in early Spring, does not come from the ground, as the ground and roots are both frozen, which would make it impossible; neither can it be supplied entirely from the body of the tree, having been retained there during the winter, as this supply would soon run out and leave the tree dry. He believes that the tree is replenished with sap from the "vapor of water in the atmosphere." At night the tree gets cooler than the atmosphere, which causes the vapor to be absorbed, and the coolness also contracts the moisture in the tree, which has the effect to produce a "suction in the night," and "in the daytime, owing to the heat, an outward pressure." "This is why sap flows by day and ceases at night." This expansion by the heat of the sun, causes an increased pressure, and this is why the flow is largest near the surface of the tree, as proven by a shallow hole compared with a deeper one, and why sap is sweeter in proportion as it is drawn near the surface of the tree; hence, the more shallow the hole the richer the sap. On this account, there can be several qualities of sap drawn from one tree. It is not the quantity of sap the tree supplies, which determines its value for sugar-making, but the quality; and, as a rule, that which offers the most makes the poorest sugar. The most sap is obtained within 10 to 12 feet of the ground. It diminishes in regular proportion, according to height. At 30 feet the flow was found to be one and a half quarts, and above scarcely nothing. The trees will yield from 12 to 24 gallons a day. In cold climates, more sugar can be obtained from maple sap than in warm latitudes, where molasses exceeds. Poor soil produces the richest sap, and the rich soil the poorest. One tree with two spouts, will produce 20 pounds of sugar; and one tree with three spouts, 39 1-2 pounds of sugar. Toward the last of the season the sap is sweeter, and more sugar can be made from the same amount of sap.

Green's Larger History of the English People.

One of the most brilliant and thoroughly valuable historical works which have appeared in many years is Green's "Larger History of the English People." Fairly ranking with Macaulay's great work in the absorbing interest of its narrative, it excels that in its adaptation to popular needs,in that it covers the entire period of English history, from the earliest to modern times, instead of a brief portion as does Macaulay. It richly deserves a place in the homes of the masses, and we are glad to note that it is now placed within their reach, being reduced in price from the $10.00 for the four volume edition of the Harpers to as low as 50 cents for one edition just being issued by The Useful Knowledge Publishing Co., 162 William Street, New York. They are publishing it in several styles, as follows: In five volumes Elzevir edition. Utility binding, 15 cents, cloth 30 cents, half Russia, 40 cents per volume, (postage five to seven cents per volume extra), and a Model Octavo edition, in one volume, Utility binding, 50 cents, cloth, 65 cents, half Russia, 80 cents, (by mail 15 cents extra). Numerous other standard works will rapidly follow the publication of this, of which catalogues will be sent free on request. This house sells only to buyers direct; no discounts from their wonderfully low prices being possible to Booksellers and Agents. The reading public wish God-speed to the enterprise, which is under the energetic and skillful guidance of Mr. Alden, late head of The American Book Exchange. The new company sails under the good motto of "Owe no man anything—buy and sell for cash. Gold dollars ask no favors"—and Mr. Alden thinks it is therefore free from the danger of wrecking by competing millionaire publishers and the lawyers.

☞When Columbia county farmers can buy a true Ammoniated Super-Phosphate, made chiefly from Slaughter House Meat and Bone, for $25 per ton at the Railroad Depots, from dealers, it is folly to pay out money for the old fashioned High Cost Fertilizers, which other manufacturers persist in holding at prices varying from Thirty to Forty Dollars per ton.

The past season, everywhere, has clearly shown, that the low cost AMMONIATED SUPER PHOSPHATES paid best on Corn, Grass and Wheat. The day for high cost Manures has passed. The experience of good farmers, who look closely at FIRST COST and RESULTS, has proved that those costing $25 PER TON, OR LESS, with a reasonably good Analysis of free Phosphoric Acid AND AMMONIA, have paid them by far the best. There is abundant evidence of this, right here in Columbia Co., and from farmers who don't simply guess at what they are doing.

In the four years of the use of Baugh's $25 Phosphate, there has not been a single reasonable report of unfavorable action on any crop, and this is a testimony in itself more than volumes of certificates. We do not ask for, or publish certificates; that custom, has long ago ceased to be of any consequence either way.

An exchange says it ought to be more generally known that wheat flour is probably the best article to throw over a fire caused by the spilling and igniting of kerosene. It ought to be known, because flour is always within convenient reach, and often valuable articles of clothing, blankets, etc., are destroyed in extinguishing such fires. Ashes and sand are equally as good.

The course of the law is slow. If the business men of Bloomsburg want a bridge across the river at this place, it would be a good plan to hold a public meeting and appoint a committee to wait upon the Pennsylvania Company and see what arrangement can be made with them for building a wagon track in connection with the railroad bridge that is likely to be erected during the next three years.

A new danger has arisen for those who use sewing silk. It has been found that much of the silk has its weight increased by the addition of sugar of lead, and as this has a pleasant, sweetish taste, persons using thread are very apt to form the habit of keeping it in their mouths and thereby inducing lead poisoning. This affliction is indicated by a blue line on the gums, a furred tongue, inflammation of the lips and general debility. It will be safe to reject all silk thread having this taste.

W. A. Swan, a detective officer of Wilkesbarre, was in town last Friday. The object of his visit was to obtain possession of a little girl two or three years old, who was in the hands of improper persons. The child was taken from the Infants' Home of Wilkesbarre through the misrepresentation of the persons who applied for her, and was entrusted to their care supposing them to be respectable people. When it was ascertained that they were engaged in a disreputable business, the directors of the institution armed the officer with the necessary papers, and he secured the child and took it home with him on Friday night.

Colliers' "Banker's Daughter" was played at the Opera House last Friday evening to a large audience. We failed to discover any ground for the severe criticisms that have been made by certain papers, on the production. It is full of interest from the beginning. The members of the company sustained their several parts well. The scenery which they carry with them is good and the orchestra is first class. The people of this town have had no better play presented to them since the opening of the Opera House than the "Banker's Daughter."

A comet was discovered about a week ago by a young astronomer in Albany, which will probably reach its perihelion in May or June, and promises to give us the grandest celestial spectacle for many years. Prof. Chandler, is trying to show that the comet is flying directly at the sun and will probably approach within 100,000 miles of it. Other astronomers differ as to the nearness of its approach, some even making the distance 200,000, but all agree as to its coming very close to the sun. We may look forward to May or June for one of the grandest sights we have seen in the skies.

Those ending in 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 are extremely wet. Those ending in 7 and 8 are ordinarily well balanced. Those ending in 6 have extremely cold winters. Those ending in 2 have an early spring. Those ending in 1 have a late spring. Those ending in 3 and 4 are subject to great floods.

ASSAULT AND ROBBERY.—On the evening of Saturday the 11th inst., Joseph Bingham, aged 55 years, residing on Welsh Hill, came down town to arrange his pension papers. After doing this he went home and on entering his house he saw some one getting out from under a bed. While lighting a lamp he was violently struck on the head with a club and knocked senseless. The villain then went through his pockets taking whatever he found, which was not much. Mr. Bingham lay unconscious until Monday morning. It is supposed the robber thought Mr. Bingham had gone to draw his pension and that he could secure a considerable sum. No one has been arrested but strong suspicion points to one as the probable perpetrator of the outrage.—Montour American.

At the Central Peunsylvania Conference of the M. E. Church in session at Lock Haven, W. W. Evans, presiding Elder of the Danville district, read his report. The charges report 1,200 conversions and a total membership in the district of 8,000. Two parsonages were purchased and seven churches were built. Numerous revivals occurred at different points and the work seems to be in an advanced and hopeful state. Special reference was made to the payment of the debt on the Second Methodist Episcopal church at Danville.

The paper canvassed the great question of Sunday schools, camp meetings, cancellation of debts, etc. Seven churches are projected for the next year. The Wooden and Jackson manufacturing company of Berwick has donated $500 towards the conference claimants.

We would urge upon all newspaper subscribers the necessity of preserving their receipts. It would save editors a great deal of annoyance if everyone who comes to pay his subscription would bring his last receipt with him. About one man out of every ten has lost it, but is confident that he has paid up to a more recent date than the books show. The last receipt will always prevent dispute, and when it is not produced there is no other guide than the books, and we know that when our receipts are presented they always correspond exactly. The man who "has a receipt at home" never comes back with it to prove that the editor didn't keep his accounts straight. There are people in the world who will take a paper for four years without paying a cent for it, and then when asked to pay, insist upon it that they only owe for one year, and threaten to stop the paper if they are compelled to pay more. In such cases the last receipt is never produced.

Rev. T. M. Reese, formerly pastor of the M. E. Church here, died at Altoona on Monday morning, in his sixty third year. This news will be heard by many with deep regret, as he was held in high esteem both for his personal qualities, and his ability as a preacher. He has been suffering for several months from malaria and neuralgia. His remains were taken to Baltimore for interment.

Judge Allison, in a long and comprehensive charge on this point, said: "The new constitution holds as one of the qualifications of a voter that he"—emphasizing the pronoun—"shall have paid a State or county tax within two years. The refusal of the prosecutor in this case to make oath that he had made such a payment, in connection with the admission that he had not made it and had no personal knowledge of its having been paid, justified the judge in rejecting the vote. The judge called the attention of the jury to the phraseology of the constitution; that, properly interpreted, would require that the tax should be paid by the voter himself or by some person whom he had authorized to pay it for him. In the latter instance, he said, the principle would apply that what a man does by another he does by himself. "But this," he said, "by no means allows a stranger to intrude himself into the business of a voter, who alone can determine whether he would pay tax as a qualification for voting or not. The custom has prevailed in this city, and been extensively practiced, of obtaining names of voters from the assessment list and without the consent of the voter, and even without his knowledge, having taxes paid for him." This, the judge thought, does not constitute a legal payment of tax, because it is not done by the voter directly or indirectly and is an unauthorized act of a stranger on whom the law confers no such right. If the defendant in the case before him, he said, had accepted the prosecutor's vote, he would have been more properly chargeable with violating the law than by the act for which he was indicted.

The jury returned a verdict of not guilty and put the costs upon the prosecutor.

Buckhorn Items.

The entertainment recently given by the school under the supervision of Mr. Charles Smith was a success. Mr. Smith intends to locate in Lee County, Ill., soon. He leaves many warm friends in this community.

Mr. Charles Deitrich has returned from a visit to Vermont.

Mr. Charles Moore has again taken up his abode here, his school in Afton having closed.

Our merchant, Bruce Vanliew has now removed to his new store.

Rev. M. L. Smyser P. E. will preach in M. E. Church, on Saturday evening and Sunday morning. Rev. G. V. Savidge has returned from Conference.

Mr. Lloyd Folk is attending commercial College at Poughkeepsie, New York.

Sudden Death.

On Saturday morning last Mrs. J. G. Montgomery with her daughter had just stepped into the store of Mr. E. Creger on the corner of Mahoning and Mill street to purchase some articles and while there stated to her daughter who was with her that she felt very sick. She sat down on a chair for a minute or two and then arose to go home, but had hardly taken three steps before she fell insensible and was caught in her daughter's arms. A physician was immediately summoned who, when he had felt her pulse pronounced her dead. The sudden taking off of this so well known and highly esteemed lady sent a thrill through the community. Mrs. Montgomery was the daughter of the late Judge Cooper, an eminent lawyer in his day, and relict of Hon. John G. Montgomery, who in the year 1857 represented this district in the Congress of the United States, and fell a victim that year to what is known in History as the Washington National Hotel poisoning. She was a well read and intelligent lady, of a pleasant disposition, a devoted mother, a kind neighbor and sincere Christian. She will be much missed, not only by her immediate relatives, but by a large circle of sympathizing friends. She was buried on Tuesday last in the Grove Cemetery in this place.—Danville Intelligencer.

Jackson Slivers.

We notice that Mr. T. W. Smith is getting material ready preparatory to adding some more improvements to his already commodious farm house. Mr. Smith is one of our enterprising farmers, and believes in keeping pace with the improvement of the times.

Ex-Judge Derr has been confined to his room for several days, being incapaciated by a severe cold.

Joseph Redline Jr. who has been operating with his portable saw mill on the timber tract of Mathew McHenry for several months past is about finishing up his contract. We have not lear ned where he intends locating next.

Mrs. L. A. German who has been sick for several days, is again convalescent.

Business must be booming at A. J. Derr's store. Rumor has it that he intends to add to his clerical force after April 1st. If honesty and integrity is necessary to success, Jack has the proper requirements.

Our community was startled a few days since by the announcement that Mr. Ira Kline of upper Greenwood had died very suddenly. Mr. Kline was a good citizen, a kind father and an exemplary christian. The widow and children have the sympathy of the community in their bereavement.

The schools in Jackson have all closed their winter term. In most of the districts we had No 1 schools. Mr. S. W. McHenry who has taught successively for a period of nearly a quarter of a century, is very well liked and seems to retain that enthusiasm that most teachers lose after being in harness for a period of years.

By referring to the Republican a few issues since we notice a correspondent from Jackson who signs his name "Pilgrim," writing up the particulars of William Robbins' wedding and says his sister Emma had been keeping house for him, but had now returned home, and finishes up by wondering who she will keep house for next. Some one at my side suggests that the next person Emma peels potatoes for will be for "Pilgrim."

We notice that Samuel Bellas has added another horse to his team in lieu of the one he lost some time since. Sam can hold a sheep-skin as close to the seat as any Granger in Jackson. MORE ANON.

John C. Yocum Esq., will open an office in Catawissa for the practice of law. He is a gentleman of education and ability, and his earnest application and integrity of character promise much for him in the future. His office is in the building formerly occupied by H. J. Reeder as a justice's office.

"Hazel Kirke."

This picturesque domestic drama which is to be produced at the Opera House on Monday evening April 3d by the famous New York Madison Square Theatre Company, was lately spoken of by The Chicago Inter-Ocean as follows:

"A story as simple as a garland of autumn leaves, and as delicately beautiful, makes of "Hazel Kirke" a charming play. Over the mind sometimes steals the quiet influence of fanciful revery, when memory and imagination blend in the creation of pictures—not all complete and perfect—that delight, soften, and make better the man. Dreams they may be, that reason can dispel—as a breath dissipates the filmy clouds—a part of them. But there is rest in them. There is pleasure. A mingling of pathos and joy silently and unconsciously. Such is the impression experienced listening to the story and witnessing the action of 'Hazel Kirke.' Running quietly along, over an even way, among shadows and in sunshine, amid smiles and tears, but never turbulent, never harsh, never rugged, the piece awakens a sense more nearly akin to the feeling of reverie than any play we have ever seen. Its vicissitudes, its sorrowful phases, its lessons of wrong, arise from the attributes of moral right (or moral duty) and of love. There is nowhere an immoral act, there is nowhere a crime to be atoned for, there is no villian, no trickster, no schemer. Every phase and condition of the play is pure, clean, good. The single departure from the kindly course, the incentive of the interesting, dramatic and emotional properties of the play, is the resolute, obstinate will of a plain, honest, good old man, who reckons duty above every other earthly consideration. There is an indescribable grace, a wordless charm about the play that cannot be woven into a synopsis more than the colors of a violet can be resolved by the chemist. 'Hazel Kirke' has a strong hold on Chicago."

The great superiority of DR. BULL'S COUGH SYRUP over all other cough remedies is attested by the immense popular demand for that old established remedy.

Fertilizing a Large Farm.

W. J. Fowler writes to an exchange as follows: "That the fertility of good land may be maintained by the use of clover alone, is shown by the experience of hundreds of Western New York farmers. I know pieces of land that have never had manure. Alternate wheat and clover has been the rotation ever since the original timber was cut off. The clover each alternate year has been plowed under, and nothing but gypsum, at the rate of one hundred pounds per year, has ever been applied. This land is still in good condition, not quite equal to the fields near the barnyard, and which have had less clover but more manure, but tolerably sure for twenty to twenty-five bushels of wheat per acre. The lack in such land is more apt to be phosphate of lime, and a dressing of superphosphate applied with the wheat at seeding will cheaply and surely remedy this. By combining winter stock feeding with occasional plowing under of green clover for manure, I do not doubt that the fertility of large farms may as surely be kept up as if they were smaller. In any event, where clover is grown there must always be the roots in the soil to decay, and this will prevent very rapid deterioration of fertility. So much always depends on keeping the soil fertile, that commercial manures which on trial prove profitable should always be used.

How Good Cows are Ruined.

Milking is an art, and the farm hand who knows how to milk properly is more valuable to the careful dairyman than any other help. Of course anybody can milk, and some can milk a dozen cows before breakfast. The careful manager, however, is not so anxious for fast help as he is to employ those who are careful. The operation should never be hurried, but the milk should be drawn steadily and, as it flows, naturally. Some cows have very tender teats, and the rapid milkman forgets this fact in his endeavor to make speed. The cow that is naturally impatient and fretful does not like to submit to rough handling, and her disposition is soon ruined by such treatment. With the constant irritation she will fail in quantity, and be less productive, just as any human being would fail to perform faithful service when laboring under mental affliction or trouble. As the udder becomes distended and filled with milk the desire on the part of the cow is to be relieved of its contents, and she willingly submits to it for the relief it occasions. The constant practice of being milked at stated intervals impresses itself strongly upon her, and she will seldom offer resistance without cause. When a cow therefore, that has been a patient deliverer of milk becomes fractious the fault can always be traced to the milkman. The careless dairyman is the one who complains of the failure of his cows to keep up the flow, and bloody milk, garget and other evils are the results of his own bad management. There is another point in the treatment of cows that demands attention, and that is allowing them to stand a long time waiting to be milked. With cows that give large yields it is very painful, and when the udders have been filled to their utmost, and the milkman is not on hand to relieve them, they become exceedingly nervous and restless. This will do more to cause a cow to go dry before her period than anything else, and many a good cow has been sent to the shambles through diminution of quantity simply because nature has revolted at her sufferings and allowed her to dry up because her storehouse was not emptied of its contents at the proper times. She should also be milked to the last drop, if possible, and as the last portion of milk is claimed to be the richest, the udder should be left with nothing in it. With regularity in feeding and milking, and kind treatment at all times, the cow will not only become gentle and remain so, but will milk on several weeks longer than otherwise. An experienced dairyman needs help that are skilful, and he knows how to judge the milkman's work by the behavior of his cows. When a stable of cows begin to give trouble in milking it is only necessary to observe the manner in which they are milked in order to cure the evil. The udder of a cow is a very delicate structure, and she quickly rebels at rough usage or improper periods of milking.

A writer in the Scientific American, says: "We clean our premises of the detestable vermin, rats, by making whitewash yellow with copperas and covering the stones and rails with it. In every crevice in which a rat may go we put the crystals of the copperas and scatter in the corner of the floor. The result was a perfect stampede of rats and mice. Since that time not a footfall of either rats or mice has been heard around the house. Every spring a coat of yellow wash is given the cellar as a purifier, as as a rat exterminator, and no typhoid, dysentery or fever attacks the family. Many persons deliberately attract all the rats in the neighborhood by leaving the fruits and vegetables uncovered in the cellar, and sometimes even the soap is left open for their regalement. Cover up everything eatable in the cellar and pantry and you will soon starve them out. The precautions, joined to the service of a good cat, will prove as good a rat exterminator as the chemist can provide. We never allow rats to be poisoned in our dwelling. They are so apt to die between the walls and produce much annoyance.
